SEX TRAFFICKING AND ETHNICITY

A CASE STUDY ANALYSIS OF ETHNIC NETWORKS IN INDOOR AND OUTDOOR PROSTITUTION IN ITALY

Coordinatore: Ch.mo Prof. Ernesto U. Savona

Tesi di Dottorato di: Marina Mancuso
Matricola: 3911182

Academic Year 2012/2013
Abstract

This thesis aims at investigating the relationship among ethnicity, modalities of crime commission and relational structure of different ethnic networks involved in sex trafficking.

A case study analysis of two West African and two Balkan networks is carried out by the adoption of two methods: crime script analysis and social network analysis. A merger of the results obtained in these analyses is performed in order to understand how relationships among individuals are distributed within the criminal framework. Finally, the case studies are compared to verify whether a relationship exists between ethnicity and sex trafficking, also apart from the field of exploitation.

The results show that ethnicity has an impact on sex trafficking. In particular, it influences modi operandi and the socio-biographical characteristics of the members of the networks operating in the same field of exploitation. If different fields of exploitation are considered, both carried out by same or different ethnic groups, ethnicity appears to affect neither the modalities of crime commission nor the features of the people. Indeed, also the outdoor/indoor exploitation context seems to be relevant. Conversely, the relational structure and the relation between the latter and the modalities of crime commission do not seem to be affected by ethnicity.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS .................................................................................................................. 6

INTRODUCTION .......................................................................................................................... 7

1. SEX TRAFFICKING AND ETHNICITY .................................................................................. 10
   1.1 Sex trafficking: a widespread type of human trafficking .............................................. 10
   1.2 Sex trafficking: the key actors ...................................................................................... 13
       1.2.1 Ethnicity and sex trafficking ............................................................................... 15
           1.2.1.1 Ethnicity and crime .................................................................................... 17
   1.3 Italy: an interesting scenario for analysis ................................................................... 19
       1.3.1 The centrality of Italy in sex trafficking routes ................................................... 19
       1.3.2 Criminal ethnic networks in Italy ....................................................................... 21
           1.3.2.1 West African groups ................................................................................. 22
           1.3.2.2 Balkan groups .......................................................................................... 25
   1.4 Research problem ........................................................................................................ 28

2. DATA AND METHODOLOGY OF THE RESEARCH ....................................................... 31
   2.1 Aim and objectives of the research ............................................................................. 31
   2.2 Starting hypotheses .................................................................................................... 32
   2.3 Data sources ................................................................................................................ 33
       2.3.1 Selection and collection of case studies ............................................................... 35
       2.3.2 Limitations and advantages of the case studies ............................................... 36
   2.4 Methods ....................................................................................................................... 37
       2.4.1 Crime script analysis ......................................................................................... 38
       2.4.2 Social network analysis ..................................................................................... 41
       2.4.3 Limitations of the research methods .................................................................. 46
   2.5 Cross-sectional analysis and comparison of the results .............................................. 47
3. ANALYSIS OF THE WEST AFRICAN NETWORKS .......................................... 49
   3.1 Operation “Foglie Nere” ............................................................................. 49
      3.1.1 Operation “Foglie Nere”: crime script analysis ................................ 50
      3.1.2 Operation “Foglie Nere”: social network analysis .............................. 54
         3.1.2.1 Analysis of the attributes ............................................................... 54
         3.1.2.2 Analysis of the relationships ........................................................... 58
      3.1.3 Operation “Foglie Nere”: merger of crime script and social network analysis .... 65
   3.2 Operation “Viola” .................................................................................. 68
      3.2.1 Operation “Viola”: crime script analysis .......................................... 69
      3.2.2 Operation “Viola”: social network analysis ......................................... 73
         3.2.2.1 Analysis of the attributes ............................................................... 73
         3.2.2.2 Analysis of the relationships ........................................................... 76
      3.2.3 Operation “Viola”: merger of crime script and social network analysis ........ 83

4. ANALYSIS OF THE BALKAN NETWORKS ................................................. 87
   4.1 Operation “Shanti” ................................................................................. 87
      4.1.1 Operation “Shanti”: crime script analysis ......................................... 88
      4.1.2 Operation “Shanti”: social network analysis ...................................... 92
         4.1.2.1 Analysis of attributes ................................................................. 92
         4.1.2.2 Analysis of the relationships ....................................................... 96
      4.1.3 Operation “Shanti”: merging of crime script and social network analysis .... 103
   4.2 Operation “Harem” ................................................................................ 106
      4.2.1 Operation “Harem”: crime script analysis ....................................... 107
      4.2.2 Operation “Harem”: social network analysis .................................... 111
         4.2.2.1 Analysis of attributes ................................................................. 111
         4.2.2.2 Analysis of the relationships ....................................................... 114
      4.2.3 Operation “Harem”: merging of crime script and social network analysis .... 121

5. DISCUSSION OF THE RESULTS ................................................................. 124
   5.1. Comparing same ethnic groups involved in the same field of exploitation .......... 124
   5.2 Comparing different ethnic groups involved in the same field of exploitation .... 128
   5.3 Comparing same ethnic groups involved in different fields of exploitation ......... 134
   5.4 Comparing different ethnic groups involved in different fields of exploitation ...... 140
   5.5 Some final remarks .................................................................................. 145

CONCLUSIONS ......................................................................................... 149

The findings of the research ........................................................................ 149
Recommendations for future research and policy implications ........................................ 156

REFERENCES ................................................................................................................. 159

APPENDIXES ................................................................................................................. 170

 Appendix 1 Comparison criteria .................................................................................. 170
 Appendix 2 Analysis of the Operation “Foglie Nere” ...................................................... 172
 Appendix 3 Analysis of the Operation “Viola” ................................................................ 176
 Appendix 4 Analysis of the Operation “Shanti” ............................................................... 181
 Appendix 5 Analysis of the Operation “Harem” ............................................................. 185